Ethics in Security Management and Criminal Justice is more than a book on ethics and security. It is a compendium of security processes and their ethical justifications.

It is a rich source of information on the realities and value of criminology and security management in society—the process, art, and science of the management, supervision, and ethical leadership of law enforcement agencies.

The book is a requisite reading for all academic specialists in security management, including undergraduate and graduate students taking security-related courses. It is also handy for other disciplines such as Criminal Justice, Training of Magistrates and Judges, Law, Peace Studies, International Relations, Diplomacy, Computer Science, Business Management, Public Policy and Administration, and Social Sciences.

Crucially, the information contained herein is quite up to date, taking cognizance of the increasingly changing security trends such as cyber security, cyber-crime and terrorism.

The author, Rev. Fr. Prof. Donatus Mathenge Githui, is the Head of Chaplaincy and an Associate Professor at Dedan Kimathi University of Technology (DeKUT) in Nyeri, Kenya. He teaches Business Ethics, Philosophy, Critical Thinking, Anthropology, Ethical Issues in Security and Criminal Justice Systems in the School of Business Management and Economics.

His first book, Fundamentals of Business Ethics and Values was published by the International Institute of Science and Technology (IISTE) in 2012 in New York.

His published research papers appear in journals, namely; International Journal of Business and Social Science, European Journal of Business and Innovation Research, Journal of Energy Technologies and Policy, International Journal of Business, Humanities and Technology, European Journal of Business and Management, Journal of Education and Practice Research, Journal of Finance and Accounting, International Affairs and Global Strategy, Industrial Engineering Letters, American International Journal of Contemporary Research, Global Journal of Management and Business Research Administration and Management.

He has also given keynote speeches on ethical and moral values relating to family, business transactions, individual decision making and management as well as theological and philosophical dimensions of human life to a number of conferences in various countries among them Canada, Israel, Germany, Italy, Spain, USA, Switzerland, Austria, Philippines, Thailand and Uganda.
